WILEY

Refer & Transfer

You may receive an offer to transfer your manuscript to a more suitable Wiley journal via a streamlined resubmission process.

AUTHOR'S BENEFITS

Helping you get published quicker.

If your manuscript is not accepted by your first choice journal, transfer offers allow you to resubmit with ease to a suitable alternative Wiley journal. You are not required to reformat your manuscript before transferring. The receiving journal may then apply specific requirements if it has not adopted free format submission.

Maintaining editorial standards and publishing quality.

All submissions to a Wiley journal, including transferred submissions, are subject to rigorous evaluation in line with clear editorial policy.

Increasing your chance of publication.

The broader scope of many Wiley open access titles could increase the chance of your transferred manuscript being accepted for publication.

Great journal choice - over 1,000 open access and hybrid journals.

If you are accepted for publication in a Wiley open access journal, your article will be published under a Creative Commons license, and you retain the copyright.

Quick eligibility check for open access funding.

Payment of an article publication charge (APC) is required for publication in a Wiley open access journal; however, you may be eligible for funding support.*

Hassle free resubmission.

If evaluated by reviewers, the peer review reports travel with your transferred manuscript. The new journal's Editor can then appropriately consider these reports and use them in their own evaluation, improving the efficiency of the peer review process and making the process quicker for you overall.

HOW IT WORKS IN SIX STEPS

1 Notification

You may receive a list of potential transfer options either (a) from the Editor in the decision letter or (b) from Wiley's Transfer Desk Assistant after receiving the initial decision letter.

2 Initiation

You decide whether to transfer your manuscript (including peer review reports and all other submission files).

3 Submission

Once the transfer of the files is complete, you will receive an email request asking you to log in to the submission site's Author Center, provide any missing information unique to that journal's submission process, and complete the submission.

4 Evaluation

Your transferred manuscript will then undertake a further editorial evaluation.

Acceptance of the offer to transfer does not guarantee acceptance of your manuscript.

5 Decision

An editorial decision is taken and you will be notified of the new publishing decision.

6 Publication

If accepted, your manuscript will be published in the new journal.

Open access funding options.

If you are interested in transferring to a Gold open access journal, or selecting an open access option in a hybrid journal (OnlineOpen), you may be eligible for funding support for the article publication charge (APC):

- Authors from developing nations receive discounts or complete APC waivers.
- Institutional and funder agreements could cover charges or offer discounts. Further information is available here.